1.0 INTRODUCTION

1.1 Background

Public participation is one of the core pillars of the Constitution of Kenya 2010. Public participation is the community based process, where people organize themselves and their goals at the grassroots level and work together through governmental and nongovernmental community organizations to influence decision making processes in policy, legislation, service delivery, oversight and development matters. The public get intimately involved in the public participation process when the issue at stake relates directly to them.

Before the Constitution of Kenya, 2010, planning and implementation of rural development programs was basically the responsibility of the central government. This top (central government) down approach to planning was carried out from the central government's headquarters in Nairobi. The approach to planning continued until 1983 when the District Focus for Rural Development (DFRD) Strategy was introduced to make the district as an administrative unit (the locus) for project identification and implementation.

The DFRD strategy was to encourage community participation in the identification, planning and implementation of development projects at the district level. Central government field officers were involved in the planning and implementation programs. The strategy faced challenges in implementation as it had no legislative framework backing that could entrench the work of coordination committee.

In 2001 the ministry of local government through its reform program (Kenya Local Government Reform Program (KLGRP) introduced the Local Authorities Service Delivery Action plan (LASDAP). This was a tool developed to improve participatory planning, governance and service delivery in local authorities. This created an entry point for local authorities to constructively engage their citizens on matters of decision making at the local level.

In the year 2003 the Constituencies Development Fund was created by the Constituencies Development Fund Act, 2003 with the primary objective of addressing poverty at grassroots level by dedicating a minimum of 2.5% of the Government ordinary revenue to grassroots development and the reduction of poverty. The fund is managed by the Constituencies Development Fund Board (CDFB)

Despite tremendous benefits witnessed in improving livelihoods of the communities, there was low participation of citizens since there were no statutory guidelines on participation. The challenges that faced public participation for the CDF and LASDAP processes included:

- CDF had heavy political control while LASDAP had bureaucratic centralised control with a hierarchical structure;

- There was apathy from the public in taking part in CDF and LASDAP processes;
- Very little civic education took place before public participation was undertaken;
- Both CDF and LASDAP undertook tokenism public participation;
- Lack of determination of who the public was;
- Resource allocation to public participation was not clear cut;
- The public did not have adequate access to information;
- Lack of clear timeframes for public participation;
- Inclusivity to involved marginalised and minority groups was lacking; and
- Lack of a standard approach to public participation

1.2 Legal Framework

Article 1(2) of the Constitution of Kenya, 2010 states that all sovereign power belongs to the people of Kenya. It further states that people may exercise their sovereignty directly or through their elected representatives. After having already elected representatives, the people ought to directly exercise their sovereignty by being involved in democracy and governance processes at the national and county levels of government.

Article 10 (2) indicates that public participation is among the national values and principles of governance.

As per Article 174(c), the objects of devolution are to give powers of self-governance to the people and enhance their participation in the exercise of the powers of the State and in making decisions affecting them. Article 174(d) recognizes the rights of communities to manage their own affairs and to further their development.

Article 184(1) states that national legislation is to provide for the governance and management of urban areas and cities and shall in particular provide for participation by residents in the governance of urban areas and cities.

Article 232(1)(d) provides for the involvement of the people in the process of policy making and part (f) provides for transparency and provision to the public of timely and accurate information.

Fourth Schedule Part 2(14) stipulates that the functions and powers of the county are to ensure and coordinate the participation of communities and locations in governance at the local level. Counties are also to assist communities to develop the administrative capacity for the effective exercise of the functions and powers and participation in governance at the local level.

The Public Finance Management Act under Section 207 provides that County Governments are to establish structures, mechanisms and guidelines for citizen participation.

Under the Urban areas Act, the overarching theme is participation by the residents in the governance of urban areas and cities. The Second Schedule of the Act provides for the rights of, and participation by residents in affairs of their city or urban areas.

Similarly, article 125(2) of Public Finance Management Act 2012 states that The County Executive Committee member for finance shall ensure that there is public participation in the budget process.

1.3 Specific Objectives of Budget Public Participation

The following specific objectives were to be achieved:

- a. To engage stakeholders on identification of new projects, ranking and prioritization and ensure community ownership to strengthen sustainability.
- b. To ensure openness and accountability in public finance management. This would be achieved through providing stakeholders/community feedbacks on county policies, projects and programmes currently being implemented and the new proposals for Fiscal year 2015/2016.
- c. To ensure that the county public finance system promotes an equitable society and in particular expenditure that promotes the equitable development of the county, including by making special provision for the marginalized groups and areas. This would be achieved through harmonization and integration of results of the top down and bottom up planning approaches.

1.4 Rationale for Public Participation

Participatory budgeting aims to:

Reduce social exclusion and poverty: the traditional budgeting process can sometimes contribute to social exclusion and poverty due to elite capture, limiting resources available for service to the poor. By encouraging citizens' participation in budget decision making, participatory budgeting could be used to increase the allocation of resources to basic services in the poorest areas.

Increase efficiency in budget allocation: the budget is the most accurate statement of the government's priorities. However budgets sometimes do not reflect the real priorities of citizens.

Scarce public resources are often spent on the wrong goods or the wrong people. Public participation can improve efficiency in budget allocation by creating procedures and avenues that bring the demand side closer to budget planning.

Improve accountability and management: government budgets are often perceived as too complex and technical for citizens' understanding. The complexity of budget information can facilitate the concealing of elite capture, budget leakages and under-performance; or it can just be the result of weak management capacity. Participatory budgeting has been used to demystify the budget, and improve inter-departmental coordination, and financial management.

Increase trust between government and population: citizens often complain that government is not solving their problems and not using their taxes for their needs. Lack of public expenditure information leads to public discontent and inaccurate citizen perceptions of corruption. Participatory budgeting can strengthen trust in government substantially as it encourages citizens and government to discuss budget constraints. This process provides an opportunity for government and citizens to discuss trade – offs on the use of scarce public resources vis- a –vis urgent and strategic investments.

Strengthen democratic practices: democratic systems are not always perfect. While the budgeting process has an annual decision making cycle and a continuous execution process, governments are mainly held accountable for their decisions during election time. This time lag can create favourable conditions for elite capture, patronage and clientism. By strengthening the linkages between the whole budget process cycle and citizens' participation, participatory budgeting can improve democratic practices.

1.5 County Integrated Development Plan (2013-17)

This County Integrated Development Plan is the first publication produced by the county government of West Pokot and its stakeholders. It is the new medium term county development blueprint and is motivated by a collective aspiration for a better society by the end of the Plan period. The Plan has been informed by the Kenya Vision 2030 that aims to transform Kenya into 'a newly industrialising, middle income country providing a high quality of life to all its citizens in a clean and secure environment'. Simultaneously, the plan aspires to accelerate the realization of the MDGs for county residents by 2015. Its implementation will be through annual rolling work plans starting from the period 2013/2014. All the priorities and plans to be implemented must therefore have the CIDP as its reference point.

1.6 Public Participation Process and Methodology

The West Pokot County budget public participation started from 2nd March to 17th March 2015. County officers from planning, budget and the county line ministries conducted the public participation. Identification, mapping and mobilization of the crucial stakeholders was done through the chiefs and the Members of the county assembly.

The team leaders then defined the objectives of policy for discussion. The officers from each ministry then made presentations of the previous projects and their ongoing projects for the year 2014/15 and proposed 2015/2016 budget proposals. The citizens were then given a chance to give their views, seek clarifications and give new proposals. Techniques used were presentation, group discussions and plenary discussions.

The facilitators ensured that there was clarity of subject matter, inclusive and effective representation, climate of integrity and provision of opportunity for balanced influence and ensured commitment to the process.

1.8 Principles of Public Participation

Public participation was based on the following broad principles-

- Protection and promotion of the interest and rights of minorities, marginalized groups and communities and their access to relevant information.
- Timely access to information, data, documents and other information relevant or related to county budget process.
- Legal standing of interested or affected persons, organization, and where pertinent, community to appeal from or, review decision or redress grievances with particular emphasis on persons and traditionally marginalized communities, including women youth, and disadvantaged communities.
- Reasonable balance in the roles and obligations of county governance and non-state actors in decision making processes partnership, and to provide complementary authority and oversight.

- Recognition and promotion of the reciprocal roles of non-state actors' participation and governmental facilitation and oversight.

1.9 Gender Sensitivity, Participation and Analysis

Gender mainstreaming has been identified as a global strategy to promote gender equality. Development programs that are gender unaware have not benefited women and some have disadvantaged them further. Gender mainstreaming ensures that women's and men's concerns and experiences form an integral part of the identification, design, implementation, monitoring & evaluation of programs. This is achieved through gender budgeting and use of gender sensitive indicators among others.

Public participation turnout improved by 130 percent from the previous year. There was also significant improvement in women participation from 31 per cent in 2014 to 33.6 per cent in 2015. The table below shows the breakdown for each ward:

- Regular and targeted civic education needs to be conducted to sensitize community members on their roles and responsibilities under the devolved system of governance. Community fora could also be held on a quarterly basis in each ward to sensitize and get feedback from the community on the access, affordability and quality of services offered by the county government.
- Follow up to ensure that the identified feasible field priorities and projects are integrated in 2015/16/17/18 budgets. Priorities from public participation report for FY 2014/15 should also be considered. This is the responsibility of both the budget office and the county planning unit.
- There is need to harmonize county government projects with those of other development players to avoid funds wastage and duplication or channelling of funds from different sources to one project without structured negotiation on project funding.
